PEACE THROUGH JUSTICE PEACE DEVELOPMENT FUND 2012 ANNUAL REPORT

SUSTAINING HOPE

Making Change

PDF is a public foundation, supported by donors from all walks of life, making grants to community-based organizations that are:

Organizing to shift power, holding leaders accountable and whose leadership comes from the people most affected by the issues they are organizing around.

Working to build a movement, making connections between local issues and a broader need for systemic change.

Dismantling oppression, challenging institutional structures that perpetuate oppression and making connections with injustice.

Creating new structures, allowing power to flow from the bottom up, and are liberating, democratic, and promote healthy, sustainable communities.

New or emerging, having difficulty securing funds from other sources because they are not established.

The Peace Development Fund (PDF) is a public foundation that partners with community-based organizations and social justice movements to provide grants, training and other resources, working with donors and grantees to build a peaceful, just and equitable world.

Grants are made in two key areas:

COMMUNITY ORGANIZING GRANTS

Our Community Organizing Grants are PDF's open door to any and all who wish to apply. Through this fund and donor advised funds we are able to make general support grants to community organizations working on issues of social justice, human health and welfare.

CAPACITY BUILDING PROGRAM INITIATIVES

Our Capacity Building Program features working partnerships with particular constituencies:

- ▶ BASE (Building Action for Sustainable Environments), organized around the chemical weapons, military and civilian nuclear industries and alternative sustainable economies and their impact on health and climate change;
- ▶ Criminal Justice Initiative, building a national movement of formerly incarcerated people, their families and allies;
- ▶ Community Advised Funds, bringing donors, grassroots organizers and funders together for grantmaking and community building, strengthening relationships across sectors of the social justice movement;
- ▶ Fiscal Sponsorship Projects, providing the infrastructure that allows new community-based organizations to deliver their programs, grow their capacity and publicize their achievements.

SUSTAINING HOPE

Making Change

PDF HAS ALWAYS FOCUSED A LENS ON MOVEMENT BUILDING FROM the viewpoint of preparing the next generation of activists and confronting racism and violence. This can be seen in PDF programs such as Teaching Peace (which became From Generation to Generation), The Listening Project and PDF grants. For example, PDF was the first funder for Harambee House's Black Youth Leadership Summit over 20 years ago, which has since become an annual event. PDF has also been the first and sometimes the only funder for several environmental justice groups, criminal justice groups and grassroots community organizing.

Movement building can be seen in the organizations PDF "incubated," like the Community Media Organizing Project, which grew out of a PDF program; Resource Generation for which PDF was a founder; the National Priorities Project, originally a fiscally sponsored project of PDF; The Prison Birth Project, fiscally sponsored by PDF and today receiving technical and capacity support in the PDF Center for Peace and Justice, with a PDF staff member and board member on their advisory board; All of Us or None, an idea spawned at a PDF event—PDF provided funding and facilitation for their first retreat; and The Gathering for Justice, for which PDF provided critical staff support for The Gathering's first national convention. The list goes on and continues today through our community organizing grantmaking and fiscal sponsorship program. ■

Throughout PDF's grantmaking there are common threads of support for community-based work, for working with communities of color and low incomes, supporting international peace and justice, and affirming principles of human rights and international law. Though PDF primarily funds groups based in the U.S., PDF has also been engaged with indigenous peoples, human rights and environmental issues at the United Nations as part of our international perspective.

SPOTLIGHT ON COMMUNITY ORGANIZING GRANTS

The Richmond Peace Education Center

THE RICHMOND PEACE EDUCATION CENTER was founded in 1980 to challenge war and widen the city's understanding of nonviolent approaches to conflict. Like PDF, which was founded a year later, the center's activities began by opposing war and militarism. Over the past decade, the center focused increasingly on local issues, linking their commitments to peace and justice to local concerns about violence, inclusion and economic and racial community disparities.

Thus the Richmond Youth Peace Project (RYPP) was born in 2004 following the senseless murder of a local high school student. RYPP empowers teenagers with training, mentorship and forums to educate area youth about nonviolent alternatives to conflict. Increasingly, RYPP is also educating youth about race, class and social change. Their vision is to move the program from one focused primarily on education to one that moves youth from education to action for social change.

Richmond's history makes the youth work of the Peace Center both challenging and significant. Richmond was home to segregationist practice and sentiment well into the twentieth century. The legacy of Richmond's racial history has engendered a culture of mistrust across race and class lines as well as persistent social and economic divides. The region remains marked by extreme racial disparities: 25 percent of the city's primarily African-American population is poor compared to just 5.8 percent of neighboring (and predominantly white) Chesterfield County. The city is also seeing growing numbers of Latino immigrants, and schools report tensions among youth along ethnic lines. There are vast regional inequalities in education and opportunity in Richmond, and many city schools remain completely segregated.

One symptom of this concentrated poverty and racial segregation is an epidemic of ►

“There are no adequate words to express our appreciation for your generous grant in support of our Richmond Youth Peace Project for teenagers.”

– Richmond Peace Education Center
Richmond, VA

The Richmond Peace Education Center

◀ conflict and violence among youth and young adults. Homicide deaths in Richmond for young people age 24 and younger are more than five times higher than the statewide and national averages for the same age group. Ninety-five percent of assault-related injury visits to the city's primary trauma center are for youths age 25 years and younger. The Richmond Public School system reports thousands of nonfatal violent incidents each year, including more than 1,000 assaults.

PDF's $5,000 grant enabled RYPP to embark upon its next phase, from teaching young people nonviolent conflict resolution skills to a program that also educates young people about race, class and other oppressions and prepares them to act in their community. The grant supported a new Youth Retreat for Social Change that brought a number of youth facilitators together with other diverse youth from across the state for education, analysis of oppression and relationship-building. Fifteen teenagers of their Youth Conflict Resolution Team led programs in nonviolent conflict resolution with other youth, teaching their peers and younger children how to resolve conflict nonviolently, all year.

The grant also enabled a Youth Peace Summit that drew 150 diverse teens for a day-long peace and justice conference with empowering workshops and trainings. Speaking about the important ideas they would take away from the summit, they listed, "Always treat others the way you want to be treated—there is a thin line between love and abuse. Silence equals violence, and silence is worse than the crime itself. I can be a better leader and a team player."

RYPP was able to teach young people, particularly those at risk of exposure to violence, concrete conflict resolution skills. It also grounded their experience of race, class and other oppressions in the context of community organizing. This moved the youth to want to act on issues of concern to them, principally school safety and educational disparities. Said Adria Scharf, the center's director, "We are truly grateful for your trust and belief in our ability to be a part of the change we wish to see in our region and our world!" ■

"Your funding has strengthened and advanced our youth program in ways that otherwise would not be possible. Thank you, PDF."

(LABOR DONATED)

With this annual report, we remember and honor our good friend and board member, Kimo Campbell, who passed on into the spirit world on February 16, 2012. We also thank former Program Director, Kazu Haga, for his many years of service to PDF and grantees, and Tenille Meti, who provided much-needed administrative support in 2011-12.
